

Short/Flash Fiction

“Nuala Ní Chonchúir does sacred and profane, male and female, love, sex and war, body and mind, the Irish, the human and the non-human, better than almost any other writer I know. Her language is part poetry, part bawdyhouse; her short short stories will leave you gasping and reeling. She surely is an adjective by now: NíChonchúiresque, an original, unique.”

Tania Hershman, author of My Mother Was An Upright Piano: Fictions (Tangent, 2012)

Photo by Emilia Krystofiak

Nuala Ní Chonchúir was born in Dublin, Ireland in 1970; she lives in East Galway. Nuala's awards for her writing include RTE Radio's Francis MacManus Award and the Dublin Review of Books Flash Fiction Prize. Mother America, her fourth short story collection, was published by New Island in 2012; her second novel will be published in spring 2014.

TOWER PRESS

Of Dublin and Other Fictions

Nuala Ní Chonchúir

TOWER PRESS

Nuala Ní Chonchúir

Of Dublin

and Other Fictions

